COMMENTS

Ksenia is a very strong student who coped very well with all aspects of the work she undertook at SKOLA. She obviously had a good grounding in English before she came to the school and this was reflected in the fact that she consistently got high marks for the work done in the classroom, occasionally getting maximum scores.

Whilst here Ksenia learnt grammar concepts such as the "past simple" and comparative and superlative verbs and very quickly showed she could use this grammar in an accurate and appropriate way. She also learnt vocabulary around future careers, location and family members and showed an equal level of competence. Ksenia was also an attentive student who was always willing to help students less confident than herself. Bearing all this in mind I would recommend that Ksenia take a step up in level in her English studies as she clearly has the ability to do so. If I were to recommend one particular aspect of English for her to focus on it would be grammar.

Overall Ksenia can be very proud of the work she did at SKOLA and we wish her all the best for the future.

Dear Ms Zaharova,

I am taking the liberty of writing to you to express my profound gratitude and admiration for the group of students you sent from the Koltushy Secondary School on our course here in England, and may I assure you that I don't often write such a letter.

Your students have left an indelible impression on our campus for many reasons. Not only were they charming, friendly and polite, observing the social etiquette with a level of maturity and sophistication that is impressive and unusual. Their behaviour on campus and in the classroom was exemplary, they attacked their lessons with enthusiasm and dedication, they were thirsty for achievement, and indeed were noticeable in an out of the classroom for really trying to communicate in English. Of course you and I know that this can only open more and more doors for them in their lives ahead, and they are to be congratulated for understanding that at such a young age.

Their Group Leaders were wholly involved, absolutely dedicated in their pastoral care, a pleasure to work with as colleagues, and well liked and respected by all my staff.

Congratulations! Your students were remarkable ambassadors for their families, their school, their city and their country, and you have every reason to be enormously proud of them. One feels more confident about our planet's future when one meets young people of their ilk. Thank you to you and your staff for your clearly admirable work in preparing them for their educated future role in society.

Yours sincerely,
